Ground Zero landing gear: Is it a hoax?

Unpleasant memories. A piece of an airliner that might be from the Sept. 11 attack was found behind the Park 51 Islamic center.

Investigation. The gear was wedged in a small gap between two buildings. Police are testing to see whether it is real or a prank. PAGE 02

Senator seeks therapy ban

Sen. Brad Hoylman has introduced a bill that would legally prohibit mental health professionals from using "conversion therapies" meant to turn gay teens straight, the NY Daily News reported. Hoylman, who has a husband and a 2-year-old daughter, slammed the practice as "increasing[ing] the stigma in society and creat[ing] a culture of unacceptance for young gay and lesbian people."

"It is not only impossible, but it is detrimental to young people to attempt to convert them."

Teen threw dead newborn down chute

A Bronx woman put her dead newborn in a bag and threw it down a garbage chute on Saturday, police said. An investigation is ongoing as to whether the baby was born alive.

The 19-year-old gave birth to the premature baby at home and sought treatment at Albert Einstein University Hospital, where she told workers how she disposed of the body.

The woman was charged with misappropriation of a cadaver. An autopsy will determine if she faces further charges.

NYers ask cops to stop confiscating condoms

Pushing change.
Advocates say condoms as evidence hurts public health.

And despite one's reasons for walking on a sidewalk, everyone should practice safe sex, especially prostitutes, advocates say.

Sierra is one of the people pushing Albany this week to approve legislation barring condoms as prostitution evidence. Supporters of the No Condoms as Evidence Bill say taking away condoms poses a public health threat.

"It is a waste of money and a shame that the Health Department gives out condoms and the police take them away and destroy them," said Sierra, an educator at Harm Reduction Educators, which helps sex workers.

In Long Island, Nassau County District Attorney Kathleen Rice banned using condoms as evidence, saying losing condoms was not worth a "limited courtroom gain."

Clara Sierra was leaving a club after a night out when cops accused her of being a prostitute.

Sierra, 40, said she was trying to find her way back home after leaving a club when cops approached her.

The police were sure they were right when they found two condoms.

Sierra spent 10 days in Rikers.

Advocates say too many New Yorkers land in jail after cops confiscate condoms. Some are people like Sierra. Many transgender people report that cops assume they are sex workers.

Clara Sierra was arrested for carrying condoms. / BESS ADLER

Xiona Geovane, 35, told Metro that two weeks ago on Roosevelt Avenue in Queens, cops accused her and a friend of prostitution. They arrested them after finding condoms in her friend's purse, she said, and they spent the weekend in jail.

"I shouldn't be afraid to be walking with condoms," Geovane said.

The NYPD defended its practice, saying it nabs pimps.

"We do not understand why anyone would want to ban the use of condoms in helping to prove cases against pimps and sex traffickers and to shut down brothels," NYPD spokesman Paul Browne said. "That's what the bill sought by these advocates in fact does, and that's why we oppose it."

Is landing gear near WTC a hoax?

A police officer stands guard outside of 51 Park. / DANIELLE TCHOLAKIAN

The NYPD has reported that a piece of landing gear, seemingly from one of the airplanes that crashed into the World Trade Center on Sept. 11, 2001, has been found behind the Park 51 Islamic cultural center.

The object is wedged in an 18-inch space between 51 Park Place and 50 Murray St.

Over the weekend, NYPD officers were stationed in front of the entrance to 51 Park Place, which was cordoned off with police tape. The NYPD is treating the area as an active crime scene, and the Office of the Chief Medical Examiner is slated to determine whether to sift the surrounding soil for possible human remains.

However, it is not known whether the part is from one of those specific planes.

In a photo provided by the NYPD, a rope intertwined with the machinery is visible. Police are not ruling out the possibility that it may have been lowered into the space from the roof, Police Commissioner Ray Kelly told the Times.

According to the Post, the landing gear is about 17 inches wide.

Allegations. Bronx D.A. finds 'pattern' of abuse at Horace Mann

Bronx prosecutors revealed that an investigation found a "systemic pattern" of alleged sexual abuse at the Horace Mann School, including 12 different alleged abusers, but that they could not prosecute.

After a New York Times article detailed allegations of decades of abuse at the private school, the City Council asked the Bronx District Attorney to investigate.

The D.A. set up a hotline where victims could call. About 30 people phoned in during about a 10-month period.

Officials conducted 60 interviews, 25 with victims of alleged abuse.

Prosecutors found a "systemic pattern of alleged abuse beyond what was outlined" in the article.

The alleged actions ranged from inappropriate behavior to sexual

But prosecutors said they cannot prosecute the cases, citing reasons including the statute of limitations having passed.

"This certainly highlights an alarming gap in New York State's mandatory reporting laws," the D.A.'s report said. ALISON BOWEN

Exotic car designer Jason Wenig is working with New Yorkers for Safe, Clean and Livable Streets (NYCLASS) to build a $450,000 prototype of the horseless carriage. If the pilot project goes forward, the car could arrive in Central Park within a year.

"Passengers will feel like they are being transported into the 'Great Gatsby' era in a modern car," said Allie Feldman.

an organizer for NYClass.

The ultimate goal, according to the advocacy group, is to eliminate the use of horse-drawn carriages in the city — a practice they say is inhumane, pointing to the animals' long working hours and lack of pasture time.

City Council Speaker Christine Quinn has voiced opposition to the idea, saying the Central Park Conservancy had concerns about the project.

Reptile amnesty day. Three gators handed over in Suffolk Co.

Three alligators were turned in and no questions were asked on Saturday at the Suffolk County SPCA's first amnesty day for illegal reptiles and amphibians.

The alligators, which measured between 3 and 4 1/2 feet, were not the only cold-blooded pets released into the SPCA's care, the Daily News reported. A boa constrictor, several tortoises and a turtle were also handed over to the group.

Illegal pets have long been a problem in Long Island, where nine alligators were found in the fall of last year.

"They do not make good pets," SPCA Chief Roy Gross said. "There's a reason why they're illegal."

Tensions. Two police officers shot as Italian government sworn in Two Italian police officers were shot and wounded yesterday outside the prime minister's office in Rome as new premier Enrico Letta's government was being sworn in just a miles away.

It was not clear whether the attack by a man police said was unemployed was linked to the launch of the new government at a time of deep political divisions and social tensions exacerbated by a long slump in the economy.

Newly installed Interior Minister Angelino Alfano said the attack appeared to be an "isolated act" that did not suggest any wider security threat. But there were immediate calls for politicians to try to calm a volatile public mood.

Lawmakers press Obama to help out Syrian rebels

Military. Syria acknowledged for the first time last July that it possessed chemical and biological weapons.

Republican senators yesterday pressed President Barack Obama to intervene in Syria's civil war, saying America could attack Syrian air bases with missiles but should not send in ground troops.

Pressure is mounting on the White House to do more to help Syrian rebels fighting against the government of President Bashar al-Assad, which the Obama administration last week said had probably used chemical arms in the conflict.

"could turn the tide of battle pretty quickly," Republican Sen. Lindsey Graham told CBS's "Face the Nation."

"One way you can stop the Syrian air force from flying is to bomb the Syrian air bases with cruise missiles," the South Carolina senator said.

Graham said international action was needed to bring the conflict to a close but "you don't need boots on the ground from the U.S. point of view."

More than 70,000 people have died in Syria's two-year-old civil war. So far, the United States has limited its involvement to providing non-lethal aid to rebels. REUTERS

Military. France's foreign firepower threatened by cuts

Explosions echo through a valley in southern France, sending up plumes of smoke as four Caesar self-propelled guns fire at distant targets in drills that mirror operations in Mali.

It's a show of firepower organized by arms manufacturer Nexter to demonstrate the guns to the press and which underlines the role of the army in a conflict that has bolstered France's standing as a nation that can project military force. Yet the message may fall on deaf ears in Paris.

France's $40 billion defense budget, already watered down in recent years, could be on the chopping block as President Francois Hollande seeks savings to offset a groaning deficit and weak economic growth. REUTERS

Thirty-five years after the Supreme Court set the terms for boosting college admissions of African-Americans and other minorities, the court may be about to issue a ruling that could restrict universities' use of race in deciding who is awarded places.

Are there changes on the horizon for affirmative action?

The Supreme Court is considering a case that may change affirmative action nationwide. / GETTY IMAGES Diversity. A case in Texas could change affirmative action nationwide.

Thirty-five years after the Supreme Court set the terms for boosting college admissions of African-Americans and other minorities, the court may be about to issue a ruling that could restrict universities' use of race in deciding who is awarded a spot.

The case before the justices was brought by Abigail Fisher, a white suburban Houston student who asserts she was wrongly rejected by the University of Texas at Austin while minority students with similar grades and test scores were admitted.

The ruling is the only one the court has yet to issue following oral arguments in cases heard in October and November, the opening months of the court's annual term which lasts until the early summer. A decision may come as early as today, before the start of a two-week recess.

As hard as it is to predict when a ruling will be announced, it is more difficult to say how it might change the law. Still, even a small move in the Texas case could mark the beginning of a new chapter limiting college administrators' discretion in using race in deciding on admissions.

For decades, dating back at least to the John F. Kennedy administration of the 1960s, leaders have struggled with what "affirmative action" should be taken to help minorities. In the early years, it was seen as a way to remedy racial prejudice and discrimination; in recent decades, it's a way to bring diversity to campuses and workplaces.

Since 1978, the Supreme Court has been at the center of disputes over when universities may consider applicants' race. In that year's groundbreaking decision involving a University of California medical school, the justices forbade quotas but said schools could weigh race with other factors.

In another seminal case, the court in 2003 affirmed the use of race in admissions to create diversity in colleges.

Marvin Krislov, now president of Oberlin College in Ohio and a past vice president of the University of Michigan, says that university administrators are concerned about how broadly the ruling may sweep and whether it will reduce the number of minority students.

"Colleges and universities care deeply about student body diversity," he says, adding of his colleagues in higher educa-

Once oral arguments are held, the court's deliberations on a case are shrouded in secrecy. The timing of a decision is not known in advance. Racial dilemmas have never been easy for the court, a point underscored by the current delay. REUTERS

Checking in with some of Hollywood's biggest names to see what they've been up to — in their own words, in 140 characters or fewer.

Today, Kerry Washington is feeling fancy, Elizabeth Hurley is outnumbered, Lena Dunham is kind of over herself and David Krumholtz did not have a very fun weekend.

@kerrywashington Heading to NYC for an especially fancy fashion fitting!

@ElizabethHurley Six dogs staring hopefully at me—longing for a walk.

@lenadunham It will shock no one to learn that twice a week I run to the garbage chute pantsless. I bore myself.

@DaveKrumholtz I am not at The White House Correspondents dinner tonight because I look like either Tsar-naev brother.

Rose McGowan: Blond ambition

Rose McGowan says her new platinum tresses give her a toughness she hadn't had before. "Part of [going blond] is because I've been told [brunettes] look accessible and pleasing to the men in L.A. so as not to scare them," she says. "But then, I realized, I always scare them, so f— it. I'm just going to do whatever I want."

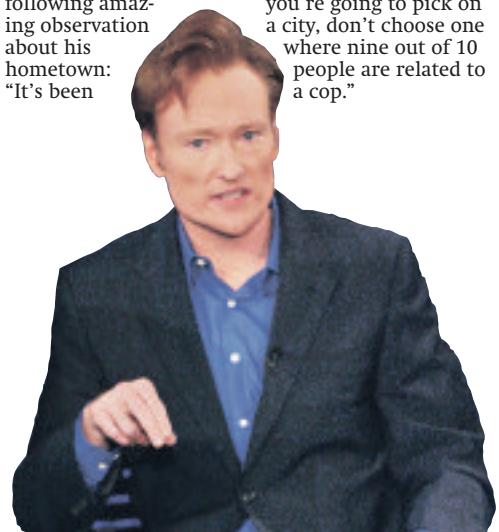

McGowan is so fierce during our interview, it is hard to believe that the whole point in her talking to me is to promote the limited-edition rose wine, Apothi Rose (pronounced like the flower, hence the hiring of McGowan; get it?). "I only drink Rosé, isn't that funny?" she says.

What's not funny? The current battles of the sexes in Hollywood. "It's all frat guys. The execs and the agents. They are people who went to law school, and it wasn't sexy enough, so they wanted to come have sex with actresses. It's not like they want to be a part of great filmmaking or anything."

O'Brien: Don't mess with Boston

As host of Saturday night's White House Correspondents' Dinner, the annual event where journalists and celebrities mix with the Washington elite, host Conan O'Brien made the following amazing observation about his hometown: "It's been said recently that you don't mess with Boston," said the Brookline native and Harvard grad. "As someone who grew up there, I'd like to echo that sentiment. It's really pretty simple: If you're going to pick on a city, don't choose one where nine out of 10 people are related to a cop."

Dating Martha Stewart?

Martha Stewart once turned to online dating site Match.com to help her find a boyfriend — but she couldn't go through with it. "I started laughing halfway down the page," she tells Matt Lauer in an interview. "It was, like, impossible." But Stewart insists, at least, that if she does go through with an online dating profile, she wouldn't hide her identity. "I want to do my real thing," she says.

I would totally date Martha Stewart, if only for her to re-tile my bathroom after sex.

Gwyneth Paltrow takes it off — all off

While Gwyneth Paltrow has received high marks from fashionistas for the sheer side panels in the gown she wore to the "Iron Man 3" premiere last week, not everyone was a fan of the underwear-free look. The Oscar-winning actress tells Ellen DeGeneres that she was "humiliated" by the bad press the gown received. "I kind of had a disaster. I was doing a show and I changed there and I went and I couldn't wear underwear," Paltrow says of the decision to rock the look. "Let's just say everyone went scrambling for a razor."

DON CHEADLE

The actor talks about filming one of the biggest superhero franchises and going joke for joke with Robert Downey Jr.

GUNNING FOR HIS SPOT ON THE AVENGERS TEAM

Don Cheadle has been on a pretty intense world tour for "Iron Man 3," and it's beginning to wear on him. "I'm beat, but you know. It's the home stretch," he offers with a shrug as we sit down to start our interview. That home stretch, by the way, is nothing to sneeze at: "We leave Thursday for New York, Toronto, it just goes on," he says. But when you're promoting one of the biggest superhero franchises on the planet — playing James "Rhodey" Rhodes, who suits up as Iron Man's government-sanctioned counterpart Iron Patriot — this kind of schedule is par for the course.

With a movie this size, I guess it's what you signed up for.
Yeah, you forget that. It's like having a baby for a woman, you know. If I could remember this every time I did a movie, I'd probably just quit. [Laughs]

How was it different for you as an actor having

Q&A

Hangin' with Downey Jr.

The humor level in this one seems amped up, especially between you and Robert Downey Jr.

There's more of it. I think if you look at the second movie, when we're in the Japanese garden at the end, you kind of see where it's headed. You see us starting that whole process at that point, and I think this is just sort of the further culmination of that. And I think there's more that could be mined, and we'll see if there's anything that's going to happen afterward. But yeah, it was nice to have the opportunity to really find some more colors in their relationship.

Shane Black directing compared to Jon Favreau?

Well, having Shane be the writer of the piece, there's a lot more of a shorthand, a lot quicker sort of availability to the writer when we're going over the scenes and going through the scenes. There's a lot of improv that happens, but the improv is in sort of a controlled playground. It's been mentioned that I really should show up in "The Avengers" at some point.

Who mentioned that?

Oh wait, me. [Laughs] The movies, the family of Marvel movies, have been faithful to their own mythology, not necessarily to what the comic book dictates. You know, in the comic book Rhodey is in the Marines, Iron Patriot is a completely different character. So there's a contained sort of mythology that the movies answer to, and that's something that Marvel is continuously creating. So yeah, he might show up, I don't know. I'd be down for it.

Is there anything you can do to lobby for that?

No, but you can get on it. Just park yourself outside of [Marvel Studio head] Kevin Feige's house.

I'm sure that will go over very well.

Well, get your friends. Don't just do it by yourself. That's not enough. That's weird.

How does the balance between making your TV show, "House of Lies," and your film work?

It's great. I mean, the show is a blitzkrieg when we're doing it. It's three months and we're shooting an episode per five days, which is really, really fast. But it's a testament to the production team behind us and our director, Stephen Hopkins, the writers and the network as well, that we're able to get through it. And it's three months out of the year, so it's pretty self-contained, and then I have the rest of the year to do the other things. I have a production company that's pretty healthy right now — we're doing a lot of stuff with them. And I try to get in some family time and rest and all that. I have a daughter on her way to college, so that's cool. So I'm pretty happy; it's been a nice balance so far.

And how much time does that leave to camp outside Kevin Feige's house?

That's what you're going to do. You have to ask yourself that question. Get on it, it's important.

Maybe this is brilliant marketing on Showtime's part, or maybe I just have a simple brain, but I can't drive past the L.A. diner House of Pies without thinking of your show.

It's your brain. [Laughs] Now, that would be marketing. I should just buy the franchise.

The 'Price' is (mostly) right

The director of "Goodbye Solo" finally works with the "High School Musical" kid.

If there's anyone in American cinema today more consciously carrying the torch of classic European neorealist cinema, it's Ramin Bahrani. "Man Push Cart," "Chop Shop" and "Goodbye Solo" are all perceptive looks at the working class that don't simply honor their struggle but respect them enough to reveal their flaws. Perhaps it's inevitable that every director winds up with a star-heavy cast, even if one of those stars is Zac Efron. And Bahrani — who has classically leaned toward non-pros, or at least under-knowns — is apparently no exception. "At Any Price" is a bit of Frankenstein monster, if not in the ways one would think.

Dennis Quaid plays Henry Whipple, a small-town Illinois seed farmer first seen lecturing his layabout son Dean (Efron) on the finer points of shamelessly manipulating people using a big grin and a forced positive attitude. A third-generation business owner, he keeps things going with genetically altered seeds and a shortage of ethics, and expects his two sons to carry on the family name. But one is off traipsing about Argentina, while Dean seems uninterested in everything, save striking back at dad.

Where Bahrani's previous films were tightly focused, the bigger "Price" — which also makes room for Heather Graham as an evil Midwestern version of a temptress — is more diffuse. It's rarely clear if it's being driven by character, narrative or a savage satire of today's economic woes.

Zac Efron, Kim Dickens and Dennis Quaid star in Ramin Bahrani's Illinois-set drama "At Any Price."

MATT DINERSTEIN, SONY PICTURES CLASSICS

When it takes a turn for a morality tale in the 11th hour, the cleanup can't help but feel rushed and only partially earned.

But there's so much goodness here. Quaid, as a kind of grifter who's been "on" so long he's even fooled himself, hasn't been this energized in ages. And Bahrani stretches his stuff.

His work here is more slick (read: the camera's on a tripod). It often doesn't feel like him, except that the concerns are roughly the same. The most shocking parts come during scenes depicting Dean's sudden jones for stock-car driving. The racing sequences are bizarrely kinetic, with Bahrani shedding his gritty realist side for an approximation of "Ronin"-era John Frankenheimer. No single film that veers between such extremes could always stay coherent, but this messy drama does more good than not.

Jim James taps into the 'Sound of God'

Solo project.

The My Morning Jacket singer talks wordless novels, shape-changing songs and putting down the guitar.

While My Morning Jacket take a short break from recording and touring, founder and lead singer Jim James continues to surprise his listeners with the drastic sonic departure of his recently released solo debut, "Regions of Light and Sound of God."

We spoke with James shortly before last month's SXSW Music Conference in Austin, Texas, but we had to enlist him for another conversation after taking in his performance.

While James has been known to step onstage for a solo set or collaborate under the moniker Yim Yames, this project marks his first official solo record.

Jim James plays a sold-out show at Webster Hall tonight. / NOLAN GAWRON, METRO

With "Regions," he has produced an epic collection of songs that seem as though divine intervention and production value have led the songwriter to explore new and sacred soil.

"A couple of these songs had a few seeds that had been milling around for a few years," says James. "Then I got this book called 'God's Man' by Lynd Ward that really inspired the songs to change shape. I almost became hypnotized by it and songs just started coming out of that. The best way I can describe it was more like scoring a film and less like writing an album. It brought the record into focus."

Published in 1929 and credited as America's first wordless novel, "God's Man" is comprised of 139

The name game

Yim Yames or Jim James?

"There is no difference. I just got tired of dealing with it," says James. "People just didn't get it and didn't see the humor in it. Humor is not appreciated today in our modern music world. People want musicians to be so f—ing serious all the time. It just turned into a snowball of people being like 'WHY WHY WHY WHY WHY?'" I mean, I don't know, I just thought it was funny. Sorry."

it's so fresh. There's something about that art deco movement that survives with a timeless quality. It still has this power. I realized I wanted to build a sound upon that which was modern, but was still old and crackly at the same time. I wanted it to be the sound of future past — like I made it to sound like the year 4000, but I made it in the year 3990."

Taking the record on the road, James is joined by a full band that has a more electronic feel than My Morning Jacket. The band also gives him the freedom to dance like a frontman.

"I love playing guitar, but it's so nice to be free of it," he says. "Then when you play it again, it becomes a very special reunion. It's where my head's been at. I've been more into dance and soul music and things that aren't as guitar-oriented."

"Let's get one thing straight: Even at your worst, you are not unclean or toxic," Ingber says in her new book.

Excerpted from "Yogalosophy: 28 Days to the Ultimate Mind-Body Makeover" by Mandy Ingber, published by Seal Press, a member of the Perseus Books Group. Copyright 2013.

Fitness. Jennifer Aniston's trainer shows us how.

After a nacho-filled weekend in Cabo or one too many cocktails at dinner, it can be tempting to hit the juicer to detox. But did you ever think that a yoga routine might have the same cleansing effect? Mandy Ingber, who has sculpted the bodies of Jennifer Aniston and Kate Beckinsale, says that detoxing doesn't have to be all about what you put into your body — what you put into your mind is just as important.

"When you abstain from old, self-defeating talk and replace it with positive self-talk, your body chemistry changes, making you feel lighter and happier. When we reprogram ourselves this way, we come from a happy and satisfied place of gratitude and make healthier, self-loving choices. Believe me, I have tried whipping myself into shape, and I have adopted the positive approach that I use now. This has given me consistency and allowed my body to fall into place effortlessly, as if it happened all by itself."

Ingber created this cleansing yoga routine to help clear up any funkiness going on inside ("Twists literally wring the toxins out of the body," she says). Start with some meditation on all the good your body can do, and check out more detoxing moves in the pages of her book.

Twisting lunge

Step your right foot forward between your hands and come up onto the ball of your left foot as you press your heel back. Try to straighten the left leg. Bring your left hand to the floor on the inside of your right foot. Twist your right arm up toward the ceiling and look up. Make sure your spine is extending from the tailbone through the crown of your head.

Chair and chair twist

With feet together, bend both knees and sit your hips back into an imaginary chair. Extend your arms up toward the ceiling, tuck your tailbone and use your core to lift your body away from the thighs. Bring your palms to a prayer position and hook the left elbow on the right knee. Press your palms together. Look up toward the ceiling. After holding for five breaths, unwind your body and go back to downward-facing dog. Repeat the sequence on the opposite side before transitioning to the boat pose.

Boat

Balance on your sit bones and extend your legs upward and your arms out in front of you, parallel to the floor. If it is too challenging to keep your legs straight or if you have a lower-back issue, you may bend the knees.

Reclining twist

Lying down on the floor, extend your arms out to the sides and bring your right foot on top of the left thigh. Slowly lower the right knee toward

Bend your left knee on the floor in front of you. Cross your right leg over to bring your right foot to the outside of the left knee. Hook your left elbow on the outside of the right knee and press your right hand into the floor near the base of your spine. Inhale as you extend your spine up, then exhale as you twist back. Repeat on other side.

JOHN W. FISCHER

We asked an expert how a career at an establishment with fancy linens and polished silver actually works.

MAKE PEOPLE HAPPY

John W. Fischer is a professor of hospitality and service management at The Culinary Institute of America — New York. Over nearly 30 years, he has worked as a captain, manager, wine director, and front waiter at some of the most famous fine dining locations in New York City.

What skills are required for waiting tables in fine dining?

You have to want to serve people. That sounds easier than it is. If — on a really fundamental level — you don't get satisfaction from making other people happy, it's wrong for you to try it as a career. Secondly, you've got to have a laser-like focus. How do you spot a good restaurant to work for? Of course, the reputation on the street is good to know. But take it with several pounds of salt, because hell hath no fury like a waiter scorned. Is it one person saying negative things, or several? Once you meet the people hiring you, take notice of how you feel around them. Do you get a creepy feeling? Do you enjoy talking to them? Working with people under stressful situations can be taxing and it's better if you actually like each other. Also, if they offer you a ton of money that's out of line with other restaurants like them, that probably means they're a pain to work for.

So how do you break in?
A good strategy is to identify the fine dining companies that also own more casual establishments. You can start in the casual location and move up to fine dining. But I think that if you're smart and nice and hardworking, you can go to many great restaurants and say, "I will do whatever you need me to do, so I can work here and get better." If you're prepared to start by washing dishes, that kind of desire is very attractive.

Who's the boss? You are.

Big boss. In her new book, Kathleen Brush explores her tough-as-nails leadership philosophy.

Everyone seems to have an opinion on what it takes to be a successful leader, but Kathleen Brush wrote the book on it. The author spent years as a turn-around consultant, helping failing companies find their core issues and resolve them. We caught up with Brush to chat about "The Power of One: You're the Boss," her how-to on being the boss.

You book has some strong scenarios of poor leadership. Did you witness this behavior firsthand?

Yes, most definitely. I didn't have to conjure up any examples. It's funny, I often hear people say, 'You could have inserted my name in any anecdote, I do the same thing and I didn't even realize.'

So you saw many of the same problems surfacing at various companies?

Sure, if you want to look at general problems. The particulars can be distinct. Often, though, companies forget that they need to reinvent themselves. When they lack strong leadership, it can be devastating to progress.

Isn't that the core idea of your book?

It is, without question. I'm trying to address a problem I see everywhere: Talented people who get into leadership because they're a good account person, for example, but they're lacking as a boss.

Your book says that being

Kathleen Brush has spent 20 years showing failing companies how to turn things around. / GAIL WODZIN trouble. People want to do a good job. When delivered correctly, employees won't feel like they're in trouble — they'll feel like they're being coached.

So how can people get it right?

I tell people to put their coach hat on, not the big, bad boss hat. These managers come back and say it was a great experience. The one thing I really want people to understand is that to be successful as a boss, you can't be the person you always disliked. You can't be the jerk boss. Be the boss that people like and respect.

What is the No. 1 thing you want people to take from the book?

If they want to be a great leader, they can be.

Boston pulls out OT win to extend series

NBA playoffs. The Knicks can't sweep the series in Boston as they drop Game 4 behind an ugly game from Anthony.

The Knicks strolled into Boston's TD Garden undermanned and ready to close out the series via a sweep, but ended up coming up just short in a 97-90 overtime defeat.

New York now leads the series, 3-1, but had every intention of coming back home without the Celtics in tow. Paul Pierce and Jeff Green made sure the Celtics would be making a return trip to New York, as they poured in 29 points and 26 points, respectively. Kevin Garnett, who's been battling a hip pointer all series, also came up big for a desperate Celtics team as he added 13 points and a game-high 17 rebounds.

The Knicks almost pulled off a historic comeback as they stormed back from down 20 points in the third quarter and made it a nip-and-tuck affair in the fourth quarter. Alas, it wasn't meant to be for the Knicks, as they couldn't get the necessary stops down the stretch — particularly on shots from Jason Terry (nine points in overtime) — or make the key buckets.

It also didn't help that

What we saw ...

1 Turn, turn, turn — The Knicks led the league in fewest turnovers (11.7) during the regular season, and were prudent in that category in the first three games. No so in Game 4, as they committed 15 turnovers — including 12 in the first half. They had more giveaways than field goals (11) in the first half.

2 Who benched J.R.? — J.R. Smith wasn't seen by Knicks fans, as he was serving a one-game suspension for his errant elbow in Game 3. Smith was sorely missed, as the Knicks' offense was stagnant, shooting 34.4 percent, and their bench was nonexistent.

3 Battle of the boards — The Knicks couldn't rebound to pull off the historic comeback win, but they did rebound on the glass nicely by hammering the Celtics, 54-40. Iman Shumpert had an impressive 12 rebounds, while Tyson Chandler added 11 boards.

Carmelo Anthony went ice cold, shooting 10-of-35.

"We would've liked to have both games, but we got one game," Raymond Felton said. "That was our goal."

TONY WILLIAMS

MLB. Overbay gets to Dickey in seventh as Yankees sweep Jays

On a day when the Yankees were mostly flummoxed by R.A. Dickey's knuckleball, Lyle Overbay was not.

He sent one into the Yankee bullpen beyond the right-center field wall for a two-run home run with two outs in the seventh inning to give the Yankees a 3-2 victory over the Blue Jays.

"He's been important to us," manager Joe Girardi said of Overbay. "He's done a really nice job for us and we got a little bit lucky when he became available at the end of spring training."

The Mets let a close game slip away from them in the seventh inning of a 5-1 loss.

With the game tied at one and two outs in the inning, starting pitcher Jon Niese allowed a single to Laynce Nix after John Buck dropped what would've been the final

It looks like Monta Ellis' prediction of the Bucks in six games was just a little off. Manning fine with Nassib selection

The Giants pulled a rare surprise in the fourth round of the NFL Draft on Saturday when they moved up to select Syracuse quarterback Ryan Nassib.

New York, of course, has Eli Manning as signal caller. Manning has yet to miss a start in his career, since taking over for Kurt Warner in 2004. The streak is now up to 135 games, the longest in the NFL.

"I called Ryan yesterday and talked to him a little bit and welcomed him to the team," Manning told Newsday at a March of Dimes event yesterday. "You always look forward to having young guys on the team, a young quarterback who will be in the meeting room."

METRO

RICK SERRITELLA

Metro spoke to the founder of the popular and well-respected NFL Draft Bible, a comprehensive draft resource, to see what he thought of the Jets' first-round picks.

'MOST COMPLETE CORNERBACK'

How does Dee Milliner, at No. 9 overall, fit into the Jets' needs?

He was the most complete cornerback in the draft. If anyone can play in the shadow of [Darrelle] Revis, Milliner has talent to do so. He will play opposite of [Antonio] Cromartie, as Kyle Wilson is not viewed as a dependable starter.

Sheldon Richardson

dynamic of the Jets' defense up front with [current linemen] Quinton Coples and Muhammad Wilkerson.

What did you like about him?

Explosive. His speed allows for rare pass-rush abilities from the defensive tackle position. He can be disruptive in backfield and has the "quicks" to chase down runners.

What stands out as a concern?

He struggles to hold the point of attack, [and] loses leverage against stronger linemen. He's a junior college transfer so he is still developing as a player. He's also coming off shoulder surgery.

KRISTIAN DYER

What did you like about the player on tape?

He's a physical cornerback who excels in bump-and-run coverage. He has fluid hips and natural instincts [and] will step up and help against the run.

What stands out as a concern?

His footwork and fundamentals need improvement. Plus, he has just one year of starting experience [on the collegiate level].

How does the Sheldon Richardson pick, at No. 13 overall, fit into the Jets' needs?

He's not your prototypical nose tackle in a 3-4 [defense]. He is better suited in a 4-3 scheme. But he could change the

PUBLISHERS NOTE

All real estate advertising herein is subject to the Federal Fair Housing Act of 1968 and state and local fair housing laws. The Fair Housing Act makes it illegal to advertise any preference, limitation or discrimination on the basis of race, color, religion, sex, handicap, familial status, or national origin or an intention to make any such preference, limitation or discrimination. State or local laws may make unlawful advertising that discriminates on the basis of age, marital status, or sexual orientation. Metro US will not knowingly accept any advertising for real estate which violates the law. The law requires that all dwellings advertised are available on an equal opportunity basis. If you have any questions regarding housing discrimination, call the Long Island Housing Services at 1(800) 660-6920 in Long Island or the Anti-Discrimination Center at (212) 346-7600 in New York City. To file a complaint call HUD toll-free at (800) 669-9777 or the New York City Commission on Human Rights at (212) 306-7500
